For Danny, reluctant manager of his late uncle's sea front bar, living in Shrove is a far cry from his previous life in Spain and the ghosts he thought he'd left behind. When one day, a raven-haired stranger bursts through the door, he suddenly realises there is a reason to stay - despite the hives and the problem down below! Maggie is delighted to have her nephew home from Spain and living next door. The family BB, The Brambles is a big responsibility and her mental state is declining rapidly. When she mistakes the airing cupboard for the fridge, a state of emergency is called and Maggie finds herself on the slippery slope to retirement. Amidst all the madness, it seems there's only one place where Rosie and Danny's budding romance has a chance to blossom - Maggie's old beach hut. But that's not just fog they can see in the distance. There's an intruder on the horizon. And there's a black cloud of trouble in the form of Septic Sadie who will stop at nothing to win the real man of her dreams.
