Excerpt from The Facts as to the Philippine Islands: Compiled for the Enlightenment of the American People Forty seven million dollars doesn t sound very big when we are dealing in the figures of the world s commerce, but the forty seven million dollars in trade that passed between the archipelago and the mainland of the United States during the calendar year 1912, when analyzed and viewed from the different angles of Past, Present, and Future, carries a story that must make every thoughtful person in the land sit up and take notice, for the greater part of it has been created since enactment of the Payne bill, that tardy act which gave American products blanket protection in Philippine markets and Philippine products a sort of limited, half hearted preference in those of the United States. But, imperfect though it be, still it is along the right lines and what it already has done furnishes a basis for estimating the possibilities of the future. In Spanish times we sold the islands a bare half million dollars worth a year. This consisted almost wholly...
